

Chante Anderson, Ph.D.

Visiting Instructor, Department of Communication Studies

Dr. Chante Anderson, also known as Dr. A, is a native New Yorker who brings a wealth of experience and expertise as a dedicated educator with a diverse background in communication and media. He kick-started his career journey by earning a BA in Speech Communication from Morgan State University and subsequently delving into broadcast journalism at WCBS-TV in New York City.

Dr. A then transitioned into the music industry before making a significant transition into teaching, starting in public schools in Tucson, Arizona, and later in Houston, Texas. Continuing his pursuit of knowledge, Dr. A pursued his master's in communication at Texas Southern University, which he completed in 2014. His passion for communication led him to share his expertise by teaching at the community college level for two years. Dr. A's academic journey culminated in the completion of his PhD from Texas A&M University in 2021.

Dr. Anderson took on a new role as a faculty member at Texas Southern University in the fall of 2021, where he continues to inspire and educate students in the field of communication. His unique blend of industry experience and academic achievements enriches his teaching approach and provides valuable insights to his students.
